CHOLERA.

HOW TO PREVENT OR CURE IT.

Dr. Hamlin's Letter from Constanti-

To the Editor of the Christian Mirror:

DEAR SIR: The cholers which has just left us after committing fearful ravages, is making its way into Europe, and will probably cross the Atlantic before another summer has passed.

Having been providentially compelled to have a good degree of practical acquaintance with it, and to see it in sill its forms and singes during each of its invasious of Constantinople, I wish to make to my friends in Maine some suggestions which may relieve anxiety or be of practical use.

1st. On the approach of the cholena, every family should be prepared to treat it without waiting for a physician. It does its work so expeditiously, that while you are waiting for the doctor it is done. To the Editor of the Christian Mirror:

is done.

2d. If you prepare for it, it will not come. I think there is no disease which may be avoided with so much certainty as the cholera. But providential circumstances, or the thoughtless indiscrete which was a bounded.

as the cholera. But providential circumstances, or the thoughtless indiscretions of some member of a household may invite the attack, and the challenge will never be refused. It will probably be made in the night, your physician has been called in another direction, and you must treat the case yourself or it will, be fatal.

3d. Causes of Attack. I have personally investigated at least a hundred cases, and not less than three-fourths could be traced directly to improper diet, or to intoxicating drinks, or to both united. Of the remainder, suppressed perspiration would comprise a great number. A strong, healthy, temperate, laboring man had a severe attack of cholera, and after the danger had passed I was curious to ascertain the cause. He had been cautious and prudent in his diet. He used nothing intoxicating. His residence was in a good locality. But after some hours of hard labor and very profuse perspiration, he had lain down to take his customary map right against an open winder through which a very refreshing hard labor and very profuse perspiration, he had lain down to take his costomary nap right against an open window through which a very refreshing breeze was blowing. Another cause is drinking largely of cold water when hot and thirsty. Great fatigue, great auxiety, fright, fear, all figure among exciting causes. If one can avoid all these he is safe from the cholera as from being swept away by a comet.

4th. Symptoms of an attack. While cholera is prevalent in a place almost every one experiences more or less disturbance of digestion. It is doubtless in part imaginary. Every one notices the slightest variation of feeling, and this gives an importance to mere trifles.
There is often a slight nausea, or transient pains, or rumbling sounds when no attack follows. No one is entirely free from these. But when diarrhea commences, though painless and slight,
it is in reality the skirmishing party of the advancing column. It will have at first no single characteristic of Asiatic cholera. But do not be deceived. It is the cholera nevertheless. Wait a little, give it time to get hold, say to yourself "I feel perfectly well, it will soon pass off," and in a short time you will repent of your folly in vain. I have seen many a one commit suicide
in this way.

Sometimes, though rarely, the attack

In this why.

Sometimes, though rarely, the attack commences with vomiting. But in whatever way it commences it is sure to hold on. In a very few homes the patient may sink into the collapse. The hands and feet become cold and purplish, the countenance at first nervous and anxious, becomes gloomy and apathetic, though a mental restlessness and raging thirst torment the sufferer while the powers of life are ebbing.—The intellect remains clear, but all the social and moral feelings seem wonderfully to collapse with the physical powers. The patient knows he is to die, but cares not a snap about it.

In some cases, though rarely, the diarrhea continues for a day or two, and the foolish person keeps about, then suddenly sinks, sends for a physician, and before he arrives, "dies as the fool dieth."

COURSE OF TREATMENT. course of Treatment.

Ist. For stopping the incipient diarrhea. The mixture which I used in 1848 with great success, and again, in 1855, has during this epidemic been used by thousands, and although the attacks have been more sadden and violent, it has fully established its reputation for efficiency and perfect safety.

attacks have locen more student and violent, it has fully established its reputation for efficiency and perfect safety. It consists of equal parts by measure of laudanum and spirits of, camphor and tincture of rhubarb. Thirty drops for an adult, on a lump of sugar, will offer check the diarrhea. But to prevent its return, care should always by taken to continue the medicine every every four hours in diminishing doses 25, 29, 15, 10, 9, when careful diet is all that will be needed.

In case the first dose does not stay the diarrhea, continue to give increasing I doses, 35, 40, 45, 60, at every movement of the bowels. Large doses will produce no injury while the diarrhea lasts. When that is checked then is the time for caution. I have never seen a case of diarrhea taken in season which was not thus controlled, but some cases of advanced diarrhea, and especially of relapse, paid no heed to it whatever. As soon as this becomes apparent, I have always resorted to this course. Prepare a teacup of starch bolied as for use in starching linen, and stir into its fall teaspoonful of laudanum for an injection. Give one-third at each movement of the bowels. In one despectation, I could not stop the diarrhea until the seventh injection, which contained nearly a teaspoonful of laudanum for an injection. The patient recovered and is in perfect health. At the same time I use prepared chalk intengrain doses, with a few drops of laudanum and camphor to each. But whatever course is pursued it must be followed up, and the diarrhea controlled, or the patient is lost.

2d. Mustard Poultees. These should be applied to the better the store the patient is the preparent of the boundary of the stormach, it is the preparent to the patient is lost.

Diet. Rice water, arrowroot, Lyndenhan's White Decoction, crust water, chamomile tea, are the best articles for a day or two after the attack is controlled. Chamomile is very valuable in restoring the tone of the stomach.

The Typhoid Fever. A typhoid state for a few days will follow all severe cases. There is nothing alarming in this. It has very rarely proved fatal. Patience and careful nursing will bring it all right. The greatest danger is from drinking too freely. When the patient seemed to be sinking, a little brandy and water or arrowroot and brandy have revived him. In this terrible visitation of the cholera, we have considered ourselves perfectly armed and equipped, with a hand bag containing mixture No. 1, mixture, No. 2, (for vomiting, etc.,) a few pounds of pounded mustard, a bottle of brandy and a paper of Chamomile flowers, and a paper of Gum Arabic.

I lay no claim to originality in recommending this course of treatment. I have adopted it from suggestions of able and experienced physicians. Having been the only doctor of many poor families living near me, I have tried various remedies recommended by physicians, but I have found none to be at all compared with the above. During the recent cholera I cannot find that any treatment has been so successful as this.

Contagion. The idea of contagion any treatment has been so successful as this.

Contagion. The idea of contagion should be abandoned. All the Missionaries who have been most with the miglinant cases day after day, are fully convinced of the non-contagiousness of the cholera. The incipient attacks which all have suffered from are to be attributed to great fatigue, making the constitution liable to an attack. In another letter I will give you a description of the cholera as we saw it, and of some individual cases.

Yours, truly, C. Hamlin.

Trichina. Messrs. Editors:—As a great deal has een said and written on the subject of Prichina without giving the public that Trichina without giving the public that information relative thereto as I think they are entitled to at the hands of the profession, and as I think it the duty of the physician to quiet the fears as well as to take care of the health of the public. I have thought proper to pen the iollowing lines on the subject of Trichina, a disease which I shall prove has no existence except in the brain of the chilmsinst or cattle speculator. A communication from a member of the profession, published in your paper last week, defines the disease to be "adisease begotten, as it is supposed, by eating raw or very under done pork, or any of its forms in sausage, &c., in which a species of worm has been deposited." With this definition of the supposed disease, I shall proceed to show that the existence of the "Trichina Spiralis," which is said to be the cause of this disease, or the caling of pork in which these animalculae exist, has nothing to do with the production of disease whatever: that it is no new thing, and that their existence in the human muscles, where they dwell sometimes in myriads has been known to the scientific for many years; for instance, they were first discovered in the human body by Mr. Hilton, of Guy's Hospital, and more fully described by Professor Owen, as far back as 1835. Mr. Owen, on examination of a portion of human muscle, information relative thereto as I think signification of the human body by Mr.

emit a peculiar odor, which I call the death odor, for when that has become decided and unmistakable, I have never known the patieut to recover. I have repeatedly worked upon such cases for hours with no permanent result. But the blue color, the cold extremities, the deeply sunken eye, the vanishing pulse are no signs that the case is hopeless. Scores of such cases in the recent epidemic have recovered. In addition to the second mixture, brandy in table spoontul every half hour, bottles of hot water surrounding the patient, especially the extremities, sinapisms and friction will often in an hour or two work wonders.

Thirst. In these and in all advanced cases thirst creates intense suffering. The sufferer craves water, and as sure as he gratifies it the worst symptoms return, and he falls a victim to the translest its have a faithful friend or attendant who will not heed his entreaties. The suffering may be, however, safely alleviated and rendered endurable. Frequent garding the throat and washing out the mouth will bring some relic. A spoonful of Gum Arable water, or of Chamonille tea may frequently be given to wet the throat. "Lyndenhams White Decoction" may also be given both as a beverage and nourishment in small quantities, frequently. In a day or two the suffering from thirst will cease, in a large majority it has not been intense for more thon twenty-four hours.

Diet. Rice water, arrowroot, Lyndenham's! White Decoction, crust water, chamonille tea, are the best articless for a day or two after the attack is controlled.

stantly rising. At a little distance east was a ravine, beside which was a shaft, which became filled with water, and from that made its way through the net work of crevices into this drift. There they were imprisoned, not knowing for how long; and there was but one possible way to make their situation known to those upon the surface. A shaft was being sunk into the cave in which they had been at work, and a small drill hole, about two inches in diameter, had been bored down through thirty feet of solid rock. By using this as a speaking trumpet, the men below made those at work above sinking the shaft aware of their unpleasant and dangerous predicament.

Of course every effort was at once made to rescue them. Barrels were brought, sunk, filled with water, and drawn up; but for a long time it seemed doubtful whether by this method the quantity of water in the shaft could be reduced faster than it was running in. At last it became evident that the water was lowering, and the men at the "pumpes" (barrels) worked with renewed energy. This continued all night till daylight next morning.

A candle or two had been lowered through the drill hole, and a "weed drap" of stimulus, by both of which the miseries of those below were rendered lighter.

By six o'clock in the morning, the water had been drawn off to such an exent that the men in the cave concluded they could make their way out. They began to wade, the water had been drawn off to such an exent that the men in the cave concluded they could make their way out. They began to wade, the water being up to their necks; and, holding their candles aloft, began to wade along the drift. By and by they came to a place where the cap-rock, or roof of the tunnel in which they were, was so low that they could keep their nose where there was air, in some places the runnel was completely filled with water for a short distance, compelling them to Jorego breathing for the time. But at last the shaft was reached, and the cold, wet, thungry, bruised, weary devils—that is the way the s a New Theory Concerning the Authorship of Shakspeare.

A St. Louis correspondent writes:

"In a dismal den of an office on Chesnut street has Nehemiah Holmes, Esq., now Judge of the Supreme Court of this State, for the past lifteen years been studying and preparing a book to prove that the plays of Shakspeare were written by Lord Bacon. Judge Holmes has in his possession certain letters never before published, which are calculated to throw considerable probability in his favor. The following interesting piece of history not seenerally known bears upon the point. When Lord Bucon was Solictor-General prior to his appointment as Attorney-General, he was requested by his Majesty to prefer charges against Lord Essex. Among other allegations there was one declaring, 'that he was the author of a certain seditions play entitled Richard, calculated to excite discontent and riot among good and loyal sublects."
